Your answer sheet cannot be accepted if you fail to sign this declaration.

Le rhume et la grippe sont très contagieux. Tous les deux sont des infections virales, mais causées par des virus de familles différentes et ayant des manifestations distinctes. En général, le rhume donne des symptômes plutôt bénins et se résorbe spontanément après quatre ou cinq jours. La grippe, moins fréquente, est plus grave et peut même entraîner des décès chez les personnes très jeunes, âgées ou handicapées. En l’absence de complications, elle disparaît dans les cinq à dix jours.
