Ode to an English Teacher

- 1 He stands inside the classroom with its spare and tidy look,
The tables set in rows, and a space for every book.
His eyes twinkle with energy: The start of school's new year!
His mind, it whirls with sentences, short stories, and Shakespeare.
- 2 The clock ticks toward the first bell as he straightens stacks of files,
Anticipating students who will soon stream down the aisles.
He knows the ones who raise their hands and those who slouch in back.
He'll find a way to spark each kid and keep them all on track.
- 3 His plan—start with adventure. Yes, that's how he will commence
By reading out a chapter full of danger and suspense.
His voice filled with expression, they'll hang onto every word,
Leaning forward in their seats, their imaginations stirred.
- 4 And when the story's hero faces peril,
fear, and more,
He'll stop to say, "For homework,
please read chapters 2 through 4."
He knows this book is popular, a good first homework text.
It'll keep them reading willingly to see what happens next.
- 5 Another minute passes, his excitement
starts to climb.
He reviews a theme of poems: sonnets,
haiku, free verse, rhyme.
Admiring piles of journals, thinking: each blank empty line
Will soon be filled with students' thoughts on things he will assign.

- 6 He likes to keep things rolling, and discover what makes sparks
About dull punctuation: commas, colons, question marks.
He wants to teach what's relevant, find what will move their hearts,
Instill in them a reverence for learning language arts.
- 7 He knows they hope to get his class, that they request his name,
That love, hard work, and talent have resulted in this fame.
He doesn't make things easy, as he challenges each one,
Expects the best on every test—but tries to keep things fun.
- 8 He knows about distractions—from gadgets, games, and friends.
It's quite a feat, he must compete with all those other trends.
Yet every year he manages to let something sink in,
Instilling a respect for words—considers that a “win.”
- 9 It's quiet in the classroom as he glances at the clock,
Wipes a smudge from off the blackboard, straightens out the chalk.
A few more ticks, the seconds click, he hears the school bell ring,
Eyes briefly shut, he wonders what another year will bring.
